GEORGIA - HISTORY OF ELECTIONS

1990-2010
On December 10, 1948 the General Assembly of the United Nations (UN) adopted the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. This Declaration is mandatory for all UN Member States.

ARTICLE 21 STATES THE FOLLOWING:

“Everyone has the right to take part in the government of his/her country, directly or through freely chosen representatives.

Everyone has the right of equal access to public service in his/her country.

The will of the people shall be the basis of authority of government; this will be expressed in periodic and genuine elections, which shall be by universal and equal suffrage and shall be held by secret vote or by equivalent free voting procedures.

Elections in the new Republic of Georgia commenced in 1990; when these democratic multiparty Parliamentary Elections were first conducted, it was at a time that Georgia was not acknowledged as sovereign country.

At present the following individuals/organisations are elective in Georgia:

President of Georgia - his term of office is 5 years;

Parliament of Georgia - its term of office is 4 years;

Representative Body of Local Self Governance - aka ‘Sakrebulo’ - its term of office is 4 years;

Mayor of Tbilisi - his term of office is 4 years.
ELECTION LEGISLATION

In Georgia, Elections are conducted in compliance with the Election Code, adopted August 2, 2001. This Code has been amended several times since its first implementation, and on a regular basis it is subject to revision for improvement.

Until 2001, the Elections held for the President and the Parliament of Georgia were determined by the Organic Law of Georgia (“Organic Law of Georgia on Elections of the Parliament of Georgia” and “On Elections of the President of Georgia”). Local Elections were conducted on the basis of Georgian “Law on the Representative Body of Local Self Governance – Sakrebulo”.

Elections in Georgia are held on the basis of universal, equal and direct suffrage, by secret vote.

The President of Georgia, the Members of the Parliament of Georgia and the Representative Body of Local Self Governance - Sakrebulo, are all elected directly by the voters.

The legal guidelines for conducting Elections in Georgia are delineated fully within the Constitution of Georgia, which advocates the universally recognized human rights’ principles and standards of international Law, the Election Code of Georgia, other legislative acts, and legal acts of election administration.
WHO IS ELIGIBLE TO PARTICIPATE IN ELECTIONS?

Citizens of Georgia have the right to an active vote once they reach the age of 18 years old; this is regardless of their race, mother-tongue, gender, religious beliefs, political opinions, educational background, ethnic origin, social affiliation, ancestral descent, property ownership and occupation. The exemption is where a person’s right to an active vote is deemed limited by the Constitution or Election Code of Georgia.

Citizens of Georgia have the right to a passive vote, providing they satisfy the provisions defined within the Election Code, except when limited by the Constitution of Georgia, the Electoral Code or the Georgian “Law on Combating Drugs”.

Citizens of Georgia whom have either been deemed incapable by the Court or are in a penitentiary establishment by sentence of the Court shall not be entitled to suffrage.

ELECTION ADMINISTRATION

The Election Administration of Georgia is an independent administrative body.

The authority of the Election Administration is defined by Organic Law of Georgia’s ‘Election Code’. The Election Administration is independent from all other public bodies and it consists of Central, District and Precinct Election Commissions.

The Central Election Commission (CEC) reports to the Parliament of Georgia.

The CEC consists of a Chairperson and 12 further members. The Chairperson, at the same time is the member of the Commission. Six members of the Commission are nominated by the President of Georgia and are then elected by the Parliament of Georgia, seven members are appointed by the political unions, having achieved the best results in previous elections. The CEC Chairperson is nominated by the President of Georgia, and elected by Commission members appointed by the parties (except for the commissioner appointed by the party having the best results at previous elections).

CHRONOLOGY

PARLIAMENTARY ELECTIONS OCTOBER 28, 1990

70 years on from the Establishing Assembly of Georgia’s election, it became possible to conduct multi-party, democratic elections; 14 parties participated in these elections, which were conducted through a mixed system: 250 members of Supreme Council (125 through the majoritarian system and 125 through the proportional system) were elected for 5 years.

The total number of voters that participated in these elections was 3,444,000 (67%).

The 4% threshold was passed by only two parties:
1. “Round Table - Free Georgia” (81 delegates).
2. Georgian Communist Party (44 delegates).

Seats were distributed as following, by the majoritarian system:
1. “Round Table - Free Georgia” (43 delegates).
2. Georgian Communist Party (17 delegates).
3. People’s Front (11 delegates).
4. “Democratic Georgia” (2 delegates).
5. Rustaveli Society (1 delegate).

Six parties were represented in the Supreme Council.

As a result of these elections the “Round Table - Free Georgia” came to power.

The organisation of the Elections was provided by the Election Commissions of the political union of the citizens of Georgian Republic, the public union and its organisations, the staff of secondary, and the vocational and high educational institutions.

Additional rules for the election of delegates were determined by the Law of Georgian Republic.

THE CHAIRPERSON OF THE CEC WAS ARCHIL CHIRAKADZE
(FIRST) PRESIDENTIAL ELECTIONS MAY 26, 1991

On April 14, 1991, the presidential regime was introduced into Georgia. The Elections were deemed to be conducted in case of participation of majority of total number of voters. Candidates whom were supported by more than 50% of the total number of voters were deemed elected.

PARLIAMENTARY ELECTIONS ON OCTOBER 11, 1992

These Elections were held through the mixed system. The rule for their conduction significantly differed from the rule used for other elections, as 75 delegates were elected on the basis of the majoritarian system (from single mandate districts) and 150 delegates were elected based on the proportional system (multi mandate districts). The Election threshold was 2%.

During the Elections of 1992, different districts were allocated for majoritarian and proportional elections; 10 widespread multi-mandate election districts were established for the elections held through the proportional election system; the number of voters in each of them was 230-250.

The proportional system balloting was held through a three-point system (each voter had 3 votes); quotas were identified and the votes were counted on the level of a multi-mandate district; the remaining votes were distributed on a national level, in compliance with the preference rule.

36 political parties and election blocs participated in these Elections, of which 24 parties passed the threshold:

2. Bloc 11th of October - 18 mandates.
5. Green Party of Georgia - 11 mandates.
8. Union of Georgian Traditionalists - 7 mandates.
15. Union of God’s Children of Georgia - 2 mandates.
17. Union of Land Cultivators of Georgia - 2 mandates.

PARLIAMENTARY ELECTIONS MAY 21, 2008

As a result of the referendum held in 2003, the composition of the Parliament of Georgia was determined by 150 MPs. In February 23, 2005, appropriate amendments were made to the Constitution, according to which 100 MPs should be elected through the proportional system and 50 MPs through the majoritarian system. This norm was in force until March 12, 2008. In March 2008, one more amendment was made to the Constitution, prescribing the election of 75 MPs through the proportional system and 75 MPs through the majoritarian system, from 75 single mandate districts. The election threshold moved down from 7% to 5% for the proportional system. Besides, the candidate should have been supported by at least 30% of voters to win the majoritarian elections. If none of the candidates received the required number of votes, a second round should be launched within two weeks.

The Parties or Political Unions that submitted the signatures of 30 thousand supporters or had representatives in the Parliament of Georgia were eligible to participate in the Elections.
